Foreign Intelligence.

The London Gazette Extraordinary, Sunday, September 15.

Captain Brisbane, of his Majesty's ship Queen Charlotte, arrived at this office last night with the following despatches from Admiral Lord Exmouth, G. C. B. addressed to John Wilson Croker, Esq.

Queen Charlotte, Algiers Bay, August 28.

SIR.—In all the vicissitudes of a long life of public service, no circumstance has ever produced on my mind such impressions of gratitude and joy as the event of yesterday. To have been one of the humble instruments, in the hands of Divine Providence, for bringing to reason a ferocious government, and destroying forever the insufferable and horrid system of christian slavery, can never cease to be a source of delight & heartfelt comfort to every individual happy enough to be employed in it. I may, I hope, be permitted, under such impressions, to offer my sincere congratulations to their lordships on the complete success which attended the gallant efforts of his Majesty's fleet in their attack upon Algiers of yesterday; and the happy result produced from it on this day by the signature of peace.

Thus has a provoked war of two days existence been attended by a complete victory, and closed by a renewed peace for England and Algy, the king of the Netherlands, on conditions dictated by the firmness and wisdom of his Majesty's government, and commanded by the vigor of their measures.

My thanks are justly due for the honor and confidence his Majesty's ministers have been pleased to repose on my zeal, on this highly important occasion. The means were by them made adequate to my own wishes, and the rapidity of their measures speak for themselves. Not more than one hundred days since, I left Algiers with the British fleet, unsuspecting and ignorant of the atrocities which had been committed at Bona; that fleet, on its arrival in England, was necessarily disbanded, and another, with proportionate resources, created & equipped; and although impeded in its progress by calms and adverse winds, has poured the vengeance of an insulted nation, in chastising the cruelties of a ferocious government, with a promptitude beyond example, and highly honorable to the national character, eager to resent oppression or cruelty, whenever practised upon those under their protection.

Would to God that in the attainment of this object I had not deeply to lament the severe loss of so many gallant officers and men; they have profusely bled in a contest which has been peculiarly marked by proofs of such devoted heroism as would rouse every noble feeling, did I dare indulge in relating them.

Their lordships will already have been informed, by his Majesty's stamp Jasper of my proceedings up to the 14th instant, in which day I broke ground from Gibraltar, after a vexatious detention, by a foul wind of 4 days.

The fleet, complete in all its points with the addition of five gun boats, fitted a Gibraltar, departed in the highest spirits, and with the most favorable prospect of reaching the port of their destination in three days; but an adverse wind destroyed the expectation of an early arrival, which was the more anxious, looked for by myself, in consequence of hearing, the day I sailed from Gibraltar, that a large army had been assembled and that very considerable additional works were throwing up, not only on both flanks of the city, but also immediately about the entrance of the Mole; from this I was apprehensive that my intention of making that point my principal object of attack and been discovered to the Day by the same means he had heard of the expedition. This intelligence was, on the following night, greatly confirmed by the Prometheus, which I had despatched to Algiers some time before, to endeavor to bring away the consul. Captain Dashwood had with difficulty succeeded in bringing away disguised in mid-shipman's uniform, his wife and daughter, leaving a boat to bring off their infant child, coming down in a basket with the surgeon, who thought he had composed it, but it unhappily cried in the gateway, and in consequence the surgeon, 3 midshipmen, in all 18 persons, were seized and confined as slaves in the usual dungeons. The child was sent off next morning by the Day, and as a solitary instance of his humanity, it ought to be recorded by me.

Captain Dashwood further confirmed, that about 40,000 men had been brought down from the interior, and all the Janissaries called in from distant garrisons, & that there were indefatigably employed in their batteries, gun-boats, &c. and every where strengthening the sea defences.

The Day informed capt. Dashwood he knew perfectly well the armament was destined for Algiers, and asked him if it was true, he replied, if he had such information he knew as much as he did, and probably from the same source—the public prints.

The ships were all in port, and between 40 and 50 gun and mortar boats ready with several more in forward repair. The Day had closely confirmed the Consul, and refused either to give him up or promise his personal safety; nor would he hear a word respecting the officers and men seized in the boats of the Prometheus.

From the continuance of adverse wind and calms, the land to the westward of Algiers was not made before the 16th, & the next morning, at day break, the fleet was advanced in sight of the city, though not so near as I had intended.—As the ships were becalmed, I embrace this opportunity of despatching a boat, under cover of the Severn, with a flag of truce, and the demands I had to make, in the name of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, on the Day of Algiers, of which the accompanying are copies: directing the officers to wait two or three hours for the Day's answer, at which time, if no reply was sent, to return to the flag ship he was met near the Mole by the Capt. of the port, who, on being told the answer was expected in one hour, replied; that it was impossible. The officer then said he would wait two or three hours; he then observed, two hours was quite sufficient.

The fleet at this time, by the springing up of the sea breeze, had reached the bay, and were preparing the boats and flotilla for service, until near two o'clock, when observing my officer was returning with the signal flag that no answer had been received, after a delay of upwards of three hours, I instantly made the signal to know if the ships were all ready, which being answered in the affirmative, the Queen Charlotte bore up, followed up by the fleet for their appointed stations, the flag, leading in the prescribed order, was anchored in the entrance of the Mole at about fifty yards distance. At this moment not a gun had been fired, and I began to suspect a full compliance with the terms which had been so many hours in their hands, at this period of profound silence, a shot was fired at us from the Mole, and two of the ships to the northward then following, this was promptly returned by the Queen Charlotte, who was then lashing to the mainmast of a brig, fast to the shore in the mouth of the Mole, and which we had steered for, as the guide of our position.

Thus commenced a fire as animated and well supported as, I believe, was ever witnessed from a quarter before three unfilnine, without intermission, & which did not cease altogether until half past eleven.

men seized in the boats of the Prometheus.

From the continuance of adverse wind and calms, the land to the westward of Algiers was not made before the 16th, & the next morning, at day break, the fleet was advanced in sight of the city, though not so near as I had intended.—As the ships were becalmed, I embrace this opportunity of despatching a boat, under cover of the Severn, with a flag of truce, and the demands I had to make, in the name of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, on the Day of Algiers, of which the accompanying are copies: directing the officers to wait two or three hours for the Day's answer, at which time, if no reply was sent, to return to the flag ship he was met near the Mole by the Capt. of the port, who, on being told the answer was expected in one hour, replied; that it was impossible. The officer then said he would wait two or three hours; he then observed, two hours was quite sufficient.

Thus commenced a fire as animated and well supported as, I believe, was ever witnessed from a quarter before three unfilnine, without intermission, & which did not cease altogether until half past eleven.

The ships immediately following me were admirably and coolly taking their stations, with a precision even beyond my most sanguine hope, and never did the British flag receive, on any occasion, more zealous and honorable support. To look further on the line than immediately round me was impossible, but so well grounded was my confidence in the gallant officers I had the honor to command, that my mind was left perfectly free to attend to other objects, and I knew them in their stations only by the destructive effect of their fire upon the walls and batteries to which they were opposed.

I had about this time the satisfaction of seeing Vice Admiral Van Capellan's flag in the station I had assigned to him, and soon after, at intervals, the remainder of his frigates, keeping up a well supported fire on the flanking batteries he had offered to cover us from, as it had not been in my power, for want of room, to bring him in front of the Mole.

About sun set I received a message from Rear Admiral Milne, conveying to me the severe loss the Invincible was sustaining, having then 150 killed and wounded, and requesting I would, if possible send him a flag to divert some of the fire he was under.

The Glasgow, near me, immediately weighed, but the wind had been driven away by the cannonade, and she was obliged to anchor again, having obtained rather a better position than before.

I had at this time sent orders to the explosion vessel, under the charge of Lieut. Fleming and Mr. Parker, by capt. Reade of the Engineers, to bring her into the Mole; but the Rear Admiral having thought she would do him essential service if exploded under the batteries in his front, I sent orders to this vessel to that effect, which were executed. I desired also the Rear Admiral might be informed that many of the ships being now in flames, and certain of the destruction of the whole, I considered it had executed the most important part of my instructions, and should make every preparation for withdrawing the ships, and desired he would do so as soon as possible with his division.

There were awful moments during the conflict, which I cannot now attempt to describe, occasioned by firing the ships so near us, and I had resisted the entreaties of so many around me, to make the attempt on the outer frigate, distant 100 yards, which at length I gave into Major Gasset, by my side, who had been eager to land his corps of miners, pressed the most anxiously to accompany Lt. Richards in this ship's barge. The frigate was instantly boarded, and in ten minutes in a perfect blaze; a gallant midshipman, in rocket boat No. 8, although forbidden, was led by his ardent spirit to follow in support of the barge, in which he was desperately wounded, his brother officer killed, and nine of his crew. The barge, by rowing more rapidly, had suffered less and lost but two.

The enemy's batteries around my division were about ten o'clock silenced, and in a state of perfect ruin and devastation; and the fire of the ships was reserved as much as possible to save powder, and to reply to a few guns now and then bearing upon us, although I fort on the upper angle of the city, which our guns could not be brought to bear, continued to annoy the ships by shot and shells during the whole of the day.

Providence at this interval gave us anxious wishes the usual land and common in this bay, and my expectations were completed. We were at hands employed warping and towing, and by the help of the light air, the whole were under sail and came to anchor out of the reach of the shells, about two in the morning, after twelve hours incessant labour.

The flotilla, of mortar gun, and rocket boats, under the direction of their respective artillery officers, shared, to the full extent of their power in the honor and glory of this day, and performed good service; it was by their fire all the ships in the port (with the exception of the outer frigate) were in flames, which extended rapidly over the whole, and store houses and gun boats, exhibiting a spectacle of awful grandeur and interest no pen can describe.

The sloops of war which had been appropriated to aid and assist the ships of the line and prepare for their retreat, performed not only that duty well, but embraced every opportunity of firing through the intervals, and were constantly in motion.

The shells from the bombs were admirably well thrown by the royal marine artillery; and though thrown directly across and over us, not an accident that I know of occurred to any ship.

The whole was conducted in perfect silence, and such a thing as a cheer I never heard in any part of the line; not that the guns were well worked and directed, will be seen for many years to come, and be remembered by the beholders for ever.

The conducting this ship to her station by the master of the fleet and ship earned the praise of all. The former has been my companion in arms for more than 29 years.

Having thus detailed, although but imperfectly, the progress of this short service, I venture to hope, that the noble and devoted services of myself and officers and men of every description, I have the honor to command, will be received by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent with his accustomed grace.

The approbation of our services by our Sovereign, and the good opinion of our country, will I venture to affirm, be received by us all with the highest satisfaction.

I attempted to name to their lordships the numerous officers who, in such a conflict, have been at different points more conspicuous than their companions, I should do injustice to many, and I trust there is no officer in the fleet I have the honor to command who will doubt the grateful feelings I shall ever cherish for their unbounded and unlimited support. Not an officer named confined his exertions within the precise limits of their own duty: all were eager to attempt services which I found more difficult to restrain than execute, and no where was this feeling more conspicuous than in my own captain, and those officers immediately about my person. My gratitude and thanks are to all under my command as well as to Vice Admiral Capellan and the others of the squadron of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands, and I trust will believe that the recollection of their services will never cease but with life. In no instance have I ever seen more energy and zeal from the youngest midshipman to the highest rank, all seemed animated by one soul and of which I shall with delight bear testimony to their Lordships, whenever that testimony can be useful.

I have confided this dispatch to Rear Admiral Milne, my second in command, from whom I have received, during the whole service, estimates to me, the most cordial and honorable support. He is perfectly informed of every transaction of the fleet, from the earliest period of my command, and is fully competent to give their lordships satisfaction on any points which I may have overlooked or have not time to state. I trust I have obtained from him his esteem and respect, and I regret I cannot more fully express my known to him.

The necessary papers, together with the defects of the ships and the return of killed and wounded, accompany this dispatch, and I am happy to say capt. Milne and Comdr. are doing well, as also the whole of the wounded. By accounts from the shore, I understand the enemy's loss in killed and wounded is between six and seven thousand men.

In recommending my officers and fleet to their Lordships' protection and favor, I have the honor to be, Sir,

ADIRIFUL FACT

A great part of the news now stirring is the news of felonious deeds, as forgery, robbery, theft, arson, and almost every species of villainous crime, perpetrated almost daily in some parts or other of these United States. Of this species of newsalone, there might be articles enough collected from the daily papers of our great cities to fill the columns of a weekly Register. It might well excite astonishment and dismay in the minds of all the well disposed, were they certified that the monthly number of felonious deeds in this country is three-fold greater, than it was four years ago. Yet there is too much reason to think it is even so. Out of the war for sailors' rights and for glory there has grown, not only a pretty large and chargeable standing army, but also a corps of flying troops, probably several thousands strong. In every direction they are traversing and pillaging the country, and their numbers seem to have been constantly increasing from term to term; the examples which our courts of justice have made of some of them being like lopping off from the scabbed Hydra its heads, which instantly sprouted up anew. There is said to have been here a greater number of convicted felons in the space of one or two of the last years, than in the whole British Isle during the same space of time, though its population is nearly double. In short, this young republic has but a few more lessons to learn, ere she will bear a comparison with the most corrupted states in Europe.

INDIA TRADE.—It is stated, in the Salem Gazette of Tuesday last, by a writer under the signature of "Salem," that 21 ships and 3 brig, cleared from Philadelphia, since the peace, for places beyond the Cape of Good Hope. I find, that during the same period the following Salem vessels have gone out on the same route, viz:—26 ships, 2 barke and 14 brig, averaging 290 tons; of which number 16 have returned to the U. S. viz: 2 from Canton, 3 from Calcutta, and 1 from Batavia, discharged their cargoes in Boston; 1 from Calcutta, in N. Y. 3 from Calcutta and 1 from Sumatra, in Salem; 2 from Manila, 8 from Sumatra, and 1 from Batavia, proceeded to Europe, with their cargoes on board, 16 ships, 1 bark and 11 brig are now absent on voyages to India.

Mermid Pearl.—In a Calcutta paper of May 29th, we find advertised for sale, "by order of government," a jewel called "the Mermid Pearl," lately transmitted to Bengal from Java, and stated to be of enormous size and value. It is about one inch and five-eighths in length, and three and a half in circumference; and its shape resembling the human body with the right hand raised above the head in the act of coming the hair. By the addition of gold and enamel the form of a Mermid has been obtained. The tail is exquisitely united to the body, of a most beautiful green, the waist ornamented with a rich purple, studded with thirteen rubies. The head superbly adorned with rubies and enamel work. The whole said to be a fit ornament for the regalia of a Monarch.

We remark with peculiar satisfaction, the reviving spirit of confidence among the mercantile classes of the community, and the increase of business in the different commercial branches.

A Brighton letter states, that the tide of emigration has turned, and that now more passengers return from France to that port than leave it.—Lon. Pap.
